Nancy: Oh, you mean Campbell Hall?

Mari: Oh yeah, right.

Nancy: Do you see that brown building over there?

Mari: Uh, behind the fountain?

Nancy: Yeah, that's it. Come on, I'm going there too. Are you here for the English placement test?

Mari: Yes, I am. How about you?

Nancy: Actually, I'm one of the English teachers here.

Mari: Oh really? Maybe I'll be in your class!

Nancy: It's possible. What's your name?

Mari: Mariko Honda, but most people call me Mari. And you?

Nancy: I'm Nancy Anderson. So, where are you from?

Mari: Japan.

Nancy: Aha. And, uh, how long have you been here?

Mari: Just three weeks.

Nancy: Really? But your English sounds great!

Mari: Thanks. That's because my family used to come here every summer to visit my grandmother when I was little. I can speak pretty well.

Nancy: Mmm-hmmm.

Mari: But now I want to go to college here, so I need to improve my skills, especially writing. Yeah, so, us, that's why I signed up for this English program.

Nancy: I see. Uh, what do you want to major in?

Mari: International business. My father has an import export company, and he does a lot of business here in the States.

Nancy: Oh, I see.

Mari: And I also want to take art classes, because I am really into art.

Nancy: Art and business. Wow. That's an interesting combination. But can't you study those things in Japan?

Mari: Well, sure, but you have to speak good English these days to get ahead in business. It's better for my career if I go to college here.

Nancy: Well, here's Campbell Hall. Good luck on the placement exam. It was nice meeting you, Mari.

Mari: Thanks. You too.

Nancy: See you later.

Nancy: Hello?

Mari: May I speak to Nancy, please?

Nancy: speaking

Mari: Uh hi, uh, my name is Mari, and I'm calling about the room for rent.

I saw you're adding at the campus housing office.

Nancy: Oh, right. OK, uh, are you a student?

Mari: Well, right now I'm just studying English, but I'm planning to start collage full-time in March.

Nancy: I see. Where are you living now ?

Mari: I've been living in a house with some other students, but I don't like it there.

Nancy: Why? What's the problem?

Mari: Well, first of all, it's really noisy, and it's not very clean. The other people in the house are real slobs I mean they never lift a finger to clean up after themselves. It really bugs me! I need a place that's cleaner and more private.

Nancy: Well, it's really quit here. We're not home very much.

Mari: What do you do?

Nancy: I teach English at the college.

Mari: wait a minute! Didn't we meet yesterday at the placement exam?

Nancy: Oh ... you are the girl from Japan! What was your name again?

Mari: Mari.

Nancy: Right. What a small word?

Mari: It really is. By the way, who else lives in the house? The ad said there are three people.

Nancy: Well, besides me there's my cousin and a part-time student. Uh, are you OK with having roommates?

Mari: Sure, as long as they're clean and not too noisy.

Nancy: don't worry. They're both easy to live with.

Mari: OK. Um, is the neighborhood safe?

Nancy: Oh sure. We haven't had any problems, and you can walk to school from here.

Mari: Well, it sounds really nice. When can I come by and see it?

Nancy: It's 3475 Hayworth Avenue. Do you know where that is?

Mari: No, I don't. Nancy: OK. From University Village you go seven blocks east on Olympic Avenue. At the intersection of Olympic and Alfred, there's a stoplight. Turn left and go up one and a half blocks. Our house is in the middle of the block on the left.

Mari: That sounds easy.

Nancy: Yeah, you can't miss it. Listen, I've got to go. Someone's at the door. See you this evening.

Mari: OK, see you later. Bye.

Nancy: Bye-bye.

Sakamoto: Well, speaking of the Internet, I wanted to ask your advice about something.

Jeff: OK What's up?

Sakamoto: Well, I just got my call phone bill for last month, and it was $160!

Jeff: Ouch.

Sakamoto: Yeah, I can't believe it. Cell phone calls are so expensive here.

Jeff: Are they cheaper in Japan?

Sakamoto: much cheaper. And we use our cell phones for email too. A lot of people don't even own a computer.

Jeff: It's amazing what you can do with cell phones these days. Talk, take pictures , send email ...

Sakamoto: Yeah. But anyway Jeff, I need to find a cheaper way to stay in touch with my parents and my friends in Japan. And I heard there's a way you can call overseas for free using your computer. Do you know anything about that?

Jeff: Of course, it's a technology called Voice over Internet. I use it all the time

Sakamoto: How does it work ?

Jeff: Well, you need a computer with a sound card, if you've got that.

Sakamoto: Yeah, I do ...

Jeff: And you also need a microphone and a headset

Sakamoto: Hmm. I don't have those.

Jeff: No sweat, you can buy them at any electronic store.

Sakamoto: OK. What else?

Jeff: Well, then you'll need to download the software, which is free, and then if the person you're calling installs the same software, there's no cost for calling.

Sakamoto: But what if they don't ? Can I call from my computer to someone's phone?

Jeff: Yes. There's a charge for that, but it's a lot cheaper than using your cell phone believe me.

Sakamoto: Could you show me how it works on your computer?

Jeff: Right now?

Sakamoto: No, it's nighttime in Japan now. Can we do it in about hours three ?

Jeff: No problem. I'll be here.

Sakamoto: Great. See you later.
