What is a clause? A clause is a group of words that contains a verb (and usually other components also). A clause may form part of a sentence or it may be a complete sentence in itself. For example:

She likes swimming and she swims every weekend.

I am driving the car that I bought last week.

When: for usual situations. If you say when something happens, you imply it definitely will happen, even if the precise timing is unknown. You use if when there's uncertainty about whether the event will happen at all. If: for unusual situations.

joining clauses with if and when

When not if

If it is certain that something has happened, is happening or will happen, we have to use when:

When I arrived back home, Sandra was no longer there.

If not when

If it is uncertain that something has happened or will happen, we have to use if:

He'll be here soon, if he caught the 1.30 train.

If I manage to get to Argentina next year, I'll come and visit you.
